

Salvatore Leone

salfleone22@gmail.com

914-268-7651

Yonkers, NY 10707

Skills:

Unity
Blender
Audacity and Reaper
C# and Java

Trello
Github Including Project Boards
Microsoft 365 Suite Including Excel
SQL in MS Access

Relevant Coursework:

Object-Oriented Programming – learned the fundamentals of OOP for broad application in programming

Data Structures – explored the different use cases for and manipulation of a variety of data structures within programming algorithms

Foundations of Computer Science – learned mathematical logic to understand the core of computer science; heavy emphasis on set theory and mathematical induction

Project Management – broad study of the various methods of project management for technical disciplines and hands on experience with project management software

Introduction to Multimedia - learned industry standard methods for creation of 3D multimedia and the psychology behind several of the creative design decisions within the most popular multimedia franchises

Benevolent Computing – formed groups and communicated with a local non-for-profit organization to provide them with a software solution to an issue of their choice

Technical Communications – learned best practice for technical writing for numerous applications including guides, oral research presentations, and press releases

Employment:

Independent Computer and Hardware Technician

Yonkers, NY

January 2021 – June 2022

- Assemble, repair, clean, and optimize computer systems for home use, assembled small form factor systems
- Assembled passively cooled system
- Recommend client's component choice based on primary uses and affordable price
- Recommend display tailored to client's system
- Repair peripherals with dysfunctions or broken components
- Solved software and firmware issues, often guiding them through text or video ca

Education:

Stony Brook University

B.S. Information Systems

Graduated: May 2023